

ACCESS TO FACILITY-SPECIFIC ENVIRONMENTAL INFORMATION

SLOVAKIA

This memo describes the European framework that applies to Slovakia as an EU Member State and in the final section discusses and links the country specific implementation of these requirements as well as national variations.

Environmental Information Directive

Slovakia is a Member of the European Union and has transposed the Environmental Information Directive, Directive 2003/4/EC. This is a broad-based disclosure requirement that requires transparency for information about the environment.

“The directive defines “information relating to the environment” in a very broad manner, covering “any available information in written, visual, aural or data-base form on the state of water, air, soil, fauna, flora, land and natural sites and on activities or measures adversely affecting, or likely to affect these, and on activities or measures designed to protect these, including administrative measures and environmental management programmes.”¹

The exceptions where disclosure may be denied are actually fairly limited.² The exceptions include, however, criminal and disciplinary proceedings and proceedings by public authorities which are confidential under national law.³ This particular exception

¹ Resources for the Future, “Public Access to Environmental Information and Data,” 2001, p. 23.

² Article 4: “2. Member States may provide for a request for environmental information to be refused if disclosure of the information would adversely affect: (a) the confidentiality of the proceedings of public authorities, where such confidentiality is provided for by law; (b) international relations, public security or national defence; (c) the course of justice, the ability of any person to receive a fair trial or the ability of a public authority to conduct an enquiry of a criminal or disciplinary nature; (d) the confidentiality of commercial or industrial information where such confidentiality is provided for by national or Community law to protect a legitimate economic interest, including the public interest in maintaining statistical confidentiality and tax secrecy; (e) intellectual property rights; (f) the confidentiality of personal data and/or files relating to a natural person where that person has not consented to the disclosure of the information to the public, where such confidentiality is provided for by national or Community law; (g) the interests or protection of any person who supplied the information requested on a voluntary basis without being under, or capable of being put under, a legal obligation to do so, unless that person has consented to the release of the information concerned; (h) the protection of the environment to which such information relates, such as the location of rare species.” (emphasis added).

³ There is no explicit authority to include administrative enforcement measures within this definition of exceptions. However, the European Court has ruled that proceedings with possible penalties may come varies widely by Member State in its implementation. Preliminary investigations can also be excluded. However, the Court of Justice for the European Union has indicated that the reason for confidentiality of certain public proceedings – even where set by national law – may not apply after the proceedings are resolved. See Flachglas Torgau GmbH v Germany, C-204-09, February 14, 2012. Actions related to imminent threats to public health or the environment are also mandated for disclosure. See Article 7(4). The Aarhus Convention⁴ requires that the interest of disclosure of public proceedings must be balanced against the need for confidentiality in each case, so that a blanket exemption is not the intent of the EU Directive implementing the Convention.⁵ All restrictions on disclosure are discretionary with each Member State and national authorities are not necessarily compelled to have the same exemptions in their individual country's laws. See "National Law" section below.

European-Pollutant Release & Transfer Registry

In line with the Aarhus Convention and the EU EID, all emissions data must be publicly available. The EU also maintains the online European Pollutant Release and Transfer Registry or E-PRTR which requires by regulation (Regulation EC No. 166/2006) the reporting of releases – both accidental and deliberate – to the air, water or soil. E-PRTR searches can be done online. The data base is about two years out of date, but it can be useful to identify past problems at facilities. Reports of discharges or releases from facilities are themselves not confidential under EU law and can also be readily obtained from each Member State.

National Law

Slovakia transposed the Directive in its Act 205 of March 12, 2004. This basically defines the scope of environmental information covered and sets up various requirements for such information to be collected. But the provisions on disclosure are linked back to the pre-existing Freedom of Information Law, no. 211/2000. That law was amended to add an Article 33, which mainly contains the standard access language within the exemption. See Mecklenburg v. Pinneberg, C-321-96, 1998 ECRI 3809, 3835. After the matter is resolved by of exemption as to "secret" information involving internal preparation of a proceeding or decision. See Mecklenburg v. Pinneberg, ficials, the reason for the exemption is arguably no longer valid. See Flachglas Torgau, supra.

⁴ The Aarhus Convention on access to justice in environmental matters also has relevant disclosure requirements. The objective is the right to participate in environmental decision-making and the information covered includes administrative measures by public authorities affecting the environment. See Article 2 (definitions). Most of this convention has been incorporated into the Environmental Information Directive at this point.

⁵ See Dirk Bunker, DEFICITS IN US AND EU MANDATORY ENVIRONMENTAL DISCLOSURE, (Springer 2011), p. 141.

from the Directive. Article 33a(1) requires publication of pollution measurements done by the government within 30 days. The Freedom of Information Act contains the disclosure exclusions and does not seem to preclude environmental enforcement information, except where it is pre-trial criminal material prepared by the prosecutor (which is confidential anywhere in the world). See Article 11. Information disclosed to the facility does not seem to be covered by any exemption to disclosure.

The country also has an environmental information portal that contains links to other materials and requires free registration.

CONTACT INFORMATION:

Randy Mott JD, Director for Europe, the Middle East and Africa, CHWMEG, +48-607-339012, Europe@chwmeg.org.

To report dead links in the above, provide feedback, or to notify CHWMEG that updates to this information are necessary, click the link below to send an email to Randy Mott (type a brief note with your feedback before sending your email):

<mailto:europa@chwmeg.org?subject=-- SLOVAKIA -- Feedback/Dead Link/Update Required for Accessing Facility Regulatory Info>